Back to School — Answer Key

Did you know?

- The specific timing of "back to school" varies significantly by country and even by U.S. state, with some starting in early August and others waiting until after Labor Day.
- Many school supply lists have grown over the decades to include items, like hand sanitizer or tissues, that reflect changing classroom practices rather than academic needs.
- Starting a new school year is a genuinely studied transition in child psychology, with real research on how routine and predictability help children adjust.
- The yellow school bus color used across much of North America was standardized in the 1930s specifically for visibility, not simply tradition.
