BBQ & Grilling — Answer Key

Did you know?

- Barbecue and grilling are technically different cooking methods, with barbecue generally referring to slow cooking over low, indirect heat.
- The distinctive smoky flavor in barbecue comes from compounds released when wood or charcoal smolders at a controlled temperature.
- Marinating meat before grilling can help tenderize it, thanks to acidic ingredients that begin breaking down proteins.
- Char marks on grilled food come from direct contact with extremely hot metal grates, not from the smoke itself.
