Black Cats — Answer Key

Did you know?

- Black cats have been associated with both good and bad luck in different cultures and time periods throughout history.
- Some animal shelters report black cats are adopted less often than other colors, a pattern some link to lingering superstition.
- Black fur color in cats comes from a specific pigment called melanin, the same pigment responsible for dark coloring in many animals.
- The superstition of a black cat crossing your path bringing bad luck is specifically a Western tradition, not universal worldwide.
