Chocolate — Answer Key

Did you know?

- Richard Cadbury, of the Cadbury chocolate family, is often credited with creating one of the first heart-shaped chocolate boxes in the Victorian era.
- Chocolate contains a compound sometimes linked to mood in casual conversation, though researchers note the actual amount and its real effect on feelings are fairly modest.
- Dark and milk chocolate genuinely differ in cocoa content, not just sweetness, which is part of why they taste and melt so differently.
- Heart-shaped chocolate boxes remain one of the most recognizable and consistently popular gift formats specifically tied to this holiday.
