Did you know?

- Corn mazes are a real example of agritourism, where working farms open part of their land to paying visitors as a recreational attraction.
- Many corn maze designs are planned out digitally before a single stalk is planted, using GPS-guided equipment to cut the exact pattern.
- The corn used for a maze is often planted more densely than a typical grain crop specifically to create thick, hard-to-see-through walls.
- Some corn mazes design their paths into a specific image or logo, visible from above, rather than a purely abstract maze pattern.
