Spanish Colors — Answer Key

Did you know?

- Most Spanish color words change with the noun they describe: rojo becomes roja before a feminine word, as in la casa roja.
- Naranja is both the fruit and the color in Spanish, just as orange is in English.
- Marrón is the usual word for brown in Spain, while café is widely used for the same color in parts of Latin America.
- Rosa, violeta and lila take their names from flowers: the rose, the violet and the lilac.
