Día de los Muertos — Answer Key

Did you know?

- Día de los Muertos is celebrated on November 1 and 2; traditionally the first day honors children and the second day honors adults.
- In 2008 UNESCO added the Indigenous festivity dedicated to the dead in Mexico to its Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity.
- Cempasúchil, the Mexican marigold, is used to decorate altars and mark a path to them; tradition says its color and scent guide the souls.
- The elegant skeleton La Catrina began as an early twentieth-century etching by José Guadalupe Posada and was popularized under that name by a 1947 mural by Diego Rivera.
