Did you know?

- Protective equipment, like helmets and pads, is often specifically engineered and tested to absorb impact in a particular sport's typical collisions.
 - Many sports have their own specialized vocabulary, like "love" in tennis or "birdie" in golf, that can be confusing to newcomers.
 - Ball design varies enormously by sport, from a basketball's grip texture to a golf ball's dimpled surface, each suited to its specific use.
 - Referees and officials in most sports rely on a shared, standardized rulebook to make consistent calls regardless of who is playing.
