Swimming — Answer Key

Did you know?

- Swimming is one of the few sports that works nearly every major muscle group in the body at once.
- The four main competitive swimming strokes are freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly, each with distinct rules about arm and leg movement.
- Chlorine is added to pools specifically to kill bacteria and other microorganisms, not primarily for its smell.
- Competitive swimwear has been specifically regulated in some events after certain high-tech suits were found to reduce drag too effectively.
